SIMILAR DESIGN COURSES

Many training and design organizations offer full-time and part-time, on-line interior design and decor courses but many may not be recognised by the building, retail, or design industries. Many of these courses are offered on-line by marketing entrepreneurs promoting and selling costly décor solutions by subterfuge without addressing important design anomalies.

Private training with a highly experienced accredited designer has many advantages. These include the following: -

- being conversant with up-to-date industry and business practice,
- understanding architectural and interior design historical and current design development,
- having current knowledge of the building materials, fixtures, furnishings and their properties.
- possessing teaching skills to offer custom designed solutions but not excluding flat-pack mass produced off-the-rack products and services.
- legal, compliance issues and standards, and code of conduct and design ethics.

HOME INTERIOR DECOR & DESIGN COURSES

The Home Interior Decor and Design courses are compiled and written using the National Training Information Service Units of Competence.

Completed Units of Competency may be used for (RPL) "Recognition of Prior Learning" when applying to TAFE for further study in Interior Decor and Design.

The School of Interior Decor and Design offers courses in home décor and design, kitchen, bathroom and interior spaces design. These courses prepare students for self-employment or work in retail, wholesale, manufacturing, or building companies, specializing in these areas.

The e-courses minimize course venue contact commitments allowing self-perpetuating study timetables. Contact with the trainer is available via telephone, email, pre-arranged appointments, or Skype.
